Assistant Director,
Legacy Planning
University Advancement
Chapman University

Biography

Lindsey Jacobs has been in legacy planning for ten years, working with supporters of Chapman University to create personal and meaningful legacies through charitable giving.

In her current role as associate director for legacy planning, she serves as a philanthropic advisor for Chapman Family members looking to create their Chapman legacy. She also manages Chapman's charitable gift annuity program and is happy to provide information or illustrations for these gifts.

In addition to working at Chapman, Lindsey has earned two degrees from the university, a bachelor's in theatre and a master's in leadership development. In 2020 she became a certified specialist in planned giving in order to better serve in her role as philanthropic advisor.
